CORRECTION

For the article titled “Duplex ultrasound changes in the great saphenous vein after endosaphenous laser occlusion with 808-nm wavelength” by Leonardo Corcos, MD, Sergio Dini, MD, Giampiero Peruzzi, MD, Daniele Pontello, MD, Mario Dini, MD, and Dino De Anna, MD (YMVA 48;5:1262-1271), the affiliation of Dr. Giampiero Peruzzi is Vascular Laboratory of Prosperius Institute for Clinical Research of Florence.

In addition, the captions of Tables 1 and 2 are inverted and should read as follows:

Table 1. Distribution of 44 great saphenous veins followed up by duplex ultrasound examination from 7 days to 12 months.

Table 2. Distribution of eight great saphenous venous fragments studied by light microscopy.

CORRECTION

For the article titled “Endovenous laser ablation: Venous outcomes and thrombotic complications are independent of the presence of deep venous insufficiency” by Brian S. Knipp, MD, Susan A. Blackburn, RN, MBA, Jess R. Bloom, RVT, Elaine Fellows, NP, William LaForge, RN, John R. Pfeifer, MD, David M. Williams, MD, and Thomas W. Wakefield, MD, for the Michigan Venous Study Group (YMVA 48;6:1538-1545), the sponsoring society listed at the top of the article is incorrect. The correct sponsoring society is the American Venous Forum. The research was presented at the Twentieth Annual Meeting of the American Venous Forum in Charleston, SC, Feb 20-23, 2008.

CORRECTION

For the article titled “The benefit of statins in non-cardiac vascular surgery patients” by Anton F. H. Stalenhoef, MD, PhD, (YMVA 49; 1:260-265), the following author corrections were omitted from the text:

In the abstract, the second-to-last sentence should read: “It appears that the evidence of statins on peripheral arterial disease is scarce and their effect on perioperative outcome inconclusive.”

In Table 1, in the last row of the column titled “Study Design”, the phrase “Case control” should be replaced with “Observational”.

In the Discussion, “HPS” refers to the Heart Protection Study.
